

Miriam Fico was educated at The College of William and Mary where she earned her BSc in Chemistry. She obtained her PhD in Analytical Chemistry from Purdue University under the direction of R. Graham Cooks where she focused on the development of miniaturized mass spectrometers. After receiving her degree she has continued to focus on product and method development for portable mass spectrometers for military defense and homeland security applications.